Professor Goldwin S French an honours graduate in history returns to Victoria as President

Dr. Goldwin S. French, chairman and professor of history at McMaster University from 1964 to 1970 and holder of three University of Toronto degrees — B.A., M.A., and Ph.D. — has been appointed President of Victoria University, succeeding Dr. John E. Hodggets.

Dr. French's appointment is for five and a half years commencing January 1, 1973.

Born at Dresden, Ont., in 1923, Dr. French took his first degree at Victoria College in 1944 in honours history. He earned his M.A. in U of T's Graduate School in European history in 1947, and his Ph.D. in Canadian history in 1958. He won Vic's Regents' gold medal in history.

During the Second World War, Dr. French served with both the Royal Canadian Air Force and the Canadian Army and from 1949 to 1958 was with the RCAF (Auxiliary), retiring as squadron leader.

Victoria's new President began his teaching career as a sessional lecturer at McMaster in 1947, rose through the academic ranks to the position of professor in 1964, at the same time becoming head of the history department. He has been a member of McMaster's Senate and Board of Governors, is editor of Canadian Studies in History and Government and of the Canadian section of the Encyclopedia of World Methodism, and editor-in-chief of Ontario Historical Studies Series 1971.

Dr. French is chairman of the committee on archives of the United Church of Canada, chairman of the Hamilton Branch of the Canadian Institute of International Affairs, and a member of the CIAA national council. He is the author of Parsons and Politicians: The Role of the Wesleyan Methodists in Upper Canada and the Maritimes from 1780 to 1855, published in 1962, and author of several major articles in learned journals.

$100,000 grant to U of T Press is to stimulate scholarly publishing

A letter from Dr. Nathan M. Pusey, President of the Andrew W. Mellon Foundation, to President John Evans announces a grant of $100,000 by the Foundation to assist the University of Toronto Press to encourage scholars and scholarship in the humanities, as well as in the social sciences, "by publishing more meritorious works of scholarship in these fields during the next several years than it otherwise could."

Marsh Jeanneret, Director of the University of Toronto Press, said:

"This assistance comes at a critically important moment in the history of scholarly publishing in this country. Scholarly output has burgeoned in recent years as academic faculties have expanded, but resources have fallen far behind the need. As a result, scholarly publishing across Canada has actually been faced with a reduction in the absolute number of books that can be published. Supplementary programs of assistance have recently been announced by the Humanities and Social Science Research Councils of Canada, the Canada Council, the federal Department of Industry, Trade and Commerce, and by the Department of the Secretary of State itself. Notwithstanding these new measures, the concern of all scholarly publishers has been, and must continue to be, to maintain existing levels of productivity, and no serious thoughts of expansion have been practical for some while.

"The genius of the grant just announced by the Mellon Foundation is that it must not be used as a substitute resource to conduct normal programs but only as a collateral grant to permit expansion of the latter. This means that it is more important than ever before that our existing programs not be allowed to lag. Our own rejection rate is so high that there can be no problem in broadening our program to the full extent of the grant just announced. It is gratifying, too, that this new program of support has to do with a completely non-competitive area of publishing — the production of works of research which otherwise could not be published, and might therefore not even be written."

The University of Toronto Press issued 105 books as well as 68 book-length issues of scholarly journals under its imprint during the past year, an output that makes it by a substantial measure the most active publisher in Canada. Mr. Jeanneret is a member of the three-man Ontario Royal Commission on Book Publishing, whose report is expected later this autumn.

October 14 is for Homecomers

Staff members who pride themselves on a memory for names and faces will have an opportunity to test their powers next week: Fall Homecoming is Saturday, Oct. 14, with '52, '57, '62 and '67 as the honoured years.

Visitors won't be at a loss for things to do and see. Following coffee at 10:30 there will be bus and walking tours of the campus. Guided tours of the Medical Sciences Building and the Faculty of Library Science have been laid on. A carillon recital begins and a bar opens in the Lower Gallery of Hart House at noon. A $3 lunch will be available in the Great Hall.

The afternoon offers a choice of football or the finer things. Carleton tackles the Blues at Varsity Stadium (2 p.m.). Guided tours of Hart House art with Mrs. Audrey Hozack in charge begin at 2:30. From 4:30 to 7 p.m.: cocktails and dancing in the Great Hall.

Mary Graham is chairman of the committee that has planned all of this. Bert Pinnington of Alumni House is the trouble-shooter.

U of T staff members asked to help telethon

Ninety telephones will be in use in East Hall, University College from Monday, Oct. 2 to Thursday, Nov. 9 when alumni will be calling their fellow graduates of U of T to ask for financial support of the University. The goal of the Varsity Fund's telethon is $225,000.

Call 2171 if you would like to help. Support will be served at 5:30 and phoning will end at 9.

Prof Bryden acclaimed chairman but students contest other seats

At the first 1972-73 meeting of the General Committee of the Faculty of Arts and Science Council, student members contested three of the elective offices in the Committee structure in opposition to the nominations presented by the steering committee and won one of them.

Prof. Kenneth Bryden, Political Economy, last year's chairman, was re-elected by acclamation.

When Dean Robert Greene, who presided over the election, announced that the steering committee recommended the re-election of Principal A. C. H. Hallett, University College, as vice-chairman and asked if there were other nominees, student members nominated Seymour Kanowitch, University College.

Mr. Kanowitch said the Committee had functioned in the past year in a state of chaos and had been ineffective because there was no trust. Students did not trust faculty and faculty did not trust students, he said. "This election," he continued, "is an example of the way the faculty is keeping a strangle-hold on the Committee." The Committee must work as a community, he concluded, and there had to be input from both constituencies.

Principal Hallett replied briefly that he was sorry to hear that there was mistrust, but he was prepared to leave it to the members of the Committee to decide.

In the recorded vote, Principal Hallett was re-elected by 68 to 31, with two abstentions.

Students from the floor nominated Howard Levitt, New College, for the position of chief proctor, against the steering committee's recommendation of Prof. G. Deane, Geography, who was in the post last year. The vote was: Deane, 68; Levitt, 31; abstentions, 5.

The three proctors nominated by the striking committee were given acclamations. They were: Prof. C. S. Churcher, Miss Carol Belford, part-time student, and W. E. Steadman, full-time student.

As he made way for Prof. Bryden to take the chair at this point, Dean Greene said: "I feel, quite frankly, that this General Committee is on trial", and he appealed to the members to bear that in mind in the year ahead.

When Prof. Bryden reported the steering committee's nomination of Principal John Robson, Victoria College, and Donald R. Cotton, part-time student, for election to the steering committee, David Laughton, Victoria full-time student, was nominated from the floor. Mr. Laughton won over Mr. Cotton, who had been on the steering committee in 1971-72, by this vote: Laughton, 78; Robson, 59; Cotton, 51.

Assistant Dean W. D. Foulds announced that Arts and Science enrolment as of Sept. 22 was 14,010, including Scarborough, Erindale, and special students.

Dean Greene told the Committee that the Faculty was in "a very vulnerable position" because it no longer had any machinery to deal with disciplinary problems, since, under the new Faculty structure, the former discipline committee had not been continued. He gave this example: Last summer two departments alleged examination irregularities on the part of a student. The problem was referred to the General Committee's committee on standing, which sent it on to Caput. The matter, Caput replied, was not within its jurisdiction, because in 1955 such disciplinary problems had been transferred to Faculty councils. Accordingly, the allegations were returned to the committee on standing. A sub-committee of that committee had resolved the matter satisfactorily, the Dean said, but the overall problem of disciplinary procedures within the Faculty remained unsettled.

The Dean announced that the Russell committee report on Extension had gone to the Council, but that the body had a long list of matters awaiting decision and he could give no further information. Prof. R. M. H. Shepherd, a member of the General Committee and chairman of the Academic Affairs committee of Governing Council, said the Russell report, as well as the FACE report on Extension, had been distributed to the members of his committee and it had a very high priority on the committee agenda.

Prof. Robert Logan introduced a resolution calling for a reduction from 70 to 50 in the number of General Committee members required for a quorum. He said some members had used the quorum count as a delaying action and he hoped that a lowering of the minimum total to 50 would help to expedite the completion of business. Principal Donald Ivey, before the Council, seconded the motion, "eulogically", because he felt that the larger quorum, but he had to be realistic. Prof. Shepherd opposed the motion. Seventy represented one-third the total membership, and that, he said, was a common practice. Elected members should take the work seriously, and those who were ex-officio should realize that they were paid to be present. He asked that the quorum of 70 be given "another try".

On a show of hands, Prof. Bryden reported that the motion had been defeated.

Another regular meeting of the General Committee is to be held on Oct. 23.

Accused in assault case protests trial postponement to January

Over the objections of the accused, Provincial Judge W. J. Camblin on Wednesday postponed the trial of William Getty on a charge of assaulting a police officer during the eviction of those occupying Simcoe Hall last March.

Judge Camblin instructed the Crown to arrange a special court. This is to be held on Jan. 17 and 18. This will take place after the trials of William Goldblatt and Randall Rogers, also charged with assaulting police, on Nov. 13 and 14. Thomas McLaughlin, accused of obstructing police, will also appear at the special hearing in January.

When Michael Noell, Crown counsel, asked for an adjournment because he was not ready to proceed, Mr. Getty protested the delay. He said the Crown had had since last March to prepare for the hearing. A week ago, when Judge Charles Drukarsh fixed Oct. 4 as the date for his next appearance in court, Mr. Getty said he had understood his trial was to go ahead on that date. The court clerk reported the case was marked "peremptory" on the information, which meant that the hearing was intended to begin at once.

Mr. Noell said that was not his understanding. He had expected that on Oct. 4 a date would be set for a special court. Mr. Getty told the judge that he had asked for a special court two weeks before but that his request had been ignored. The Crown counsel confirmed that Mr. Getty had made the request, but argued that it was difficult and took time to arrange such a hearing.

Judge Camblin said that, since the evidence of as many as 40 witnesses would have to be heard, the trial could not be included in a regular court session. If it was started at once, it would certainly be continued at later sessions. He felt that there should be a special court and instructed the Crown to arrange evidence of as many as 40 witnesses.

The judge excused all the witnesses from further attendance until November. (Mr. Getty said all of his witnesses were on hand.) Among those called by the defence and present in court were President John R. Evans, who received his subpoena at the platform at the Presidential installation ceremonies last week; Vice-President and Provost Donald F. Forster, Vice-President John H. Sword, and Vice-Provost Robin Ross. Mr. Ross also was subpoenaed at the installation.

Disciplinary machinery inadequate Internal Affairs committee told

The Governing Council's Internal Affairs committee discussed disciplinary procedures with Principal Ralph Campbell of Scarborough College, who was chairman of a Presidential advisory committee set up in February 1968 to recommend disciplinary policies and procedures.

Principal Campbell's committee released its report on Sept. 29, 1969, but its recommendations have not yet been acted upon.

Principal Campbell said that he had reviewed the report after his return to Toronto after an absence of two years in East Africa and came to the conclusion that most of the recommendations were still viable. Asked what he felt were the real disciplinary problems facing the University, he replied that few guidelines existed that made it possible for people to know what might lead to disciplinary action against them, and that existing disciplinary machinery was inadequate. There was a need for some rules and a need for a comprehensive tribunal or other structure, since Caput, which had no students on its membership, was not satisfactory.

Sydney Hermant said the more general recommendations on such a subject as discipline the better — "you can't codify." What was needed, he thought, was some practical means of taking disciplinary action in the very rare situations that arise from time to time.

Paul Cadario, committee chairman, referred to the Campbell committee's definition of non-disruptive demonstration as one that did not interfere with the essential educational functions of the University. He asked Principal Campbell if he thought the occupation of an educational area, such as Simcoe Hall, could be regarded as disruptive or non-disruptive. The reply was that it would be disruptive.

Mr. Hermant commented that negotiations in an atmosphere of occupation were "not the rule of law but the rule of anarchy."

Mr. Cadario reminded the committee that it was not its responsibility to define academic offences, such as plagiarism. "But it is our responsibility to try to recommend adequate disciplinary structures," he said. "As for what constitutes disruptive demonstrations, that is a non-academic matter and we should deal with that."

The committee will continue its exploration of the subject at its next meeting.

Working session and dinner illuminate the alumni role

Years and seasons rolled past for participants in the 4th annual orientation program for new alumni officers at Hart House Wednesday (Oct. 4).

As an improvement on the undergraduate reading lists, which was given a fast portfolio of required reading on arrival.

A fast moving, well structured course in the University administration, the U of T Alumni Association, Dept. of Alumni Affairs, the Varsity Fund and their inter-relationships was squeezed into 90 strenuous minutes.

At dinner came a flash-back to college prize nights: the formal presentation by the American Alumni Council of a 1972 Certificate of Merit to the University of Toronto Alumni Association. The main reason for this was the Report of the President's Long Range Planning Committee on Alumni Affairs (published in the Bulletin dated Sept. 23, 1971).

Principal speaker at the dinner was President John Evans who, as an accomplished seminar leader, ranged from the state of the University, the state of the Long Range report, some suggestions for deeper alumni involvement, and left his audience with topics for many future discussions. He put stress on the future. For example, while encouraging students to closer relationships with the on-going programs of colleges and faculties, he pointed out that to be effective they should deal with what's ahead — should develop a forward orientation as a counter-weight to nostalgia.

Roles for alumni

The President said that the sight of Varsity Fund station wagons lined up to take visitors on a 45 mile tour of the St. George Campus brought to mind the plight of handicapped students epitomized by Miss Mae Brown, a young woman both blind and deaf who received her B.A. degree at Spring Commencement.

He suggested the movement and orientation of handicapped students was one of the social problems within the University which well deserved the attention of alumni.

Continuing in the same vein, Dr. Evans reminded his audience of the student who came from a remote area and the cultural shock they experience in the University environment. He said a major responsibility which alumni could share is making this a more humane place for all it serves.

Dr. Evans said that communication — a subject to which the Long Range Committee devoted much attention — was one of the most important areas awaiting decisions. He said it wasn't merely a question of information moving from the University to alumni: the goal was to establish "a two-way street of knowledge".

It had to be considered, he said. He pointed to the difficulty of monitoring and analysing — in the broadest sense — the returns that would come from expenditures. He said the question constantly before the University was how to use its resources so as to achieve maximum gain.

Alumni serve Council well

Reviewing the Governing Council's early preoccupation with its own form and function, the President noted that it now has a sub-structure of committees capable of helping it to make substantive decisions on policy. The eight alumni others I have reservations." The formal recommendations on the report will be made by the Council's External Affairs Committee, the President said. He pointed out that three elected alumni members of Council are on this committee: Walter MacNeill (the chairman), William H. Broadhurst and C. Ian P. Tate.

In his state of the University remarks, Dr. Evans mentioned the review of the Arts and Science New Program. He referred to the new deans for Law, Arts and Science, Management Studies, Nursing, Library Science, Food Sciences and Forestry, new leadership at Victoria, Trinity and Scarborough. He mentioned continuing activity in Environmental Studies. He noted enthusiasm for development in new directions. He mentioned the marvellous job Dr. Pauline McGibbon is doing as Chancellor "and our ambassador." He asked the new Varsity Fund House, Dr. Georges Lenoelle to stand and be greeted by the audience.

"The college problem looms very large," Dr. Evans said — not only in economic terms, but in the need for diversity and smaller bases for members of the University. He said the changing patterns in high school curricula must be kept in mind. Among areas demanding close attention this year are the library and the employment patterns for women in academic divisions.

United front

The President said that students, staff and administration were united in their opposition to the provincial policy that increases tuition fees and decreases bursary assistance, creating real barriers for prospective students, especially those from large families and lower income groups. In another reference to finance, Dr. Evans commented that the University's income is fixed, or even declining in real terms. This blocks the hiring of the younger staff needed to give departments balance.

The American Alumni Council certificate was presented to UATAA President Walter Giles by Dr. Robert B. Linson of Ball State University, Indiana, who is Chairman of A.A.U.C. this year. Dr. Linson said that alumni organization as we know it is a North American phenomenon and that universities are peculiarly suitable for voluntary action — "Even after head and hand are obsolete, the heart will still prevail." He warmly complimented Mr. Giles on his work. Dr. Linson said Mr. Giles said the person who should be receiving the compliments was the chairman, Mr. MacDonald. Then Mr. MacDonald said that the credit belonged to members of the committee, especially John Duncanson, Director of Alumni Affairs, and Ian Montague of University of Toronto Press who carried the main load of writing the report.

UATAA 1st Vice-President, Mrs. Vivian McDonough, chaired both the dinner and the working session that preceded it. Mr. Giles talked to the new officers about the relationship they would have with UATAA and U of T. Mrs. McDonough talked about the UATAA committee structure and William H. Broadhurst, Chairman of Varsity Fund, explained how the Fund operates. Mr. Duncanson told of what happens in his department.

Joining the new officers at dinner were members of the Commission on University Government, the University-Wide Committee, the Long Range Planning Committee, and the Governing Council.
